Knee High To A Grasshopper Stephen Lawton

August 1982. The eve of the new season. Jackie Scott stumbles merrily out of the Wallsend Social Club and makes his way home. He wakes his 7-year-old son Terry and tells him that the glory days are set to return to Tyneside: Newcastle United have signed Kevin Keegan and the bairn will be there to see it all. The following Saturday Special K scores the winner on his debut as Newcastle beat QPR 1-0 at Gallowgate. And just as Keegan's love affair with United begins, so too does Terry's. 25 years later, with marriages & girlfriends, players & managers little more than water under the Tyne Bridge, father & son are rebuilding bridges of their own. And both are set to learn that some people are just born united.
