The world should prepare for a major event. It is highly likely and predictable that a pandemic is coming. Unlike the global pandemic of 1918, pathogens in today's world can travel extremely quickly. When the 1918 pandemic struck, it could take months for pathogens and their carriers to travel the globe and spread the disease. In today's world, cross globe travel can be done in a day making the time frame for which a pathogen infects its victims much shorter and at the same time, makes the impact much larger, more far reaching and exponentially more devastating.
